

I was just tapping away on the ground waiting for a worm to come up when I noticed a new green space. A sign near it read:

NEW GREEN AREA
FOR WILDLIFE

I stopped tapping away at the ground and went over to investigate.

I was surprised by what I saw when I got there – water, food, trees, pre-built nests (they are called bird boxes apparently to some passers by). I was amazed because originally it was just grey.

It continued to happen all over the grey, dark city. I started to call over birds and to tell them to get friends.

Eventually the whole of world's wildlife had heard about it; and they started planting seeds themselves. After a while the whole world was green – no smoke, no greyness, just greenness.
